Post navigation 3 Responses to Slide Share for PowerPoint Presentations [...] share PowerPoint presentations, without the sodding hassle of PowerPoint. Our team uses Slide Share for posting PowerPoint presentations and images online. [...] The following error appeared when I tried to access SlideShare: "Unable to establish a connection to the URL 'slideshare.com'." I tried to correct this by putting before and after www. (which I did in the URL), but it didn't work. I tried clearing my cookies, but that didn't work either. I then tried another browser and I received a different error: "Unable to access the page, as the server name, www.slideshare.com, appears to be misspelt." Embryonic stem cells (ESCs) are cells which are derived from the inner cell mass of a blastocyst stage embryo. ESCs can be cultured indefinitely in vitro and can differentiate into almost any kind of cells. Upon differentiation, ESCs typically exhibit a more stable and uniform expression pattern of a specific set of genes than that of the undifferentiated cells. The use of mouse ESCs as donor cells has produced many novel insights into the regulation of pluripotency and differentiation in mammals and has developed the use of ESCs for therapeutic applications in regenerative medicine. In particular, mouse ESCs have been widely used for the production of chimeras, in which the chimera is created by injecting the ESCs into an embryo together with a single cell from a different blastocyst, resulting in the production of a chimeric animal (creating a novel individual) containing two genetically different populations of cells derived from the original blastocyst
