FIFA (Football, FIFA) is a series of video games developed by EA Canada. It was created in the early 80s and the series is one of the most popular sports-related games in the world. The current iteration is FIFA 20, a football video game developed by Electronic Arts and released in September 2019. On 18 September 2019, ESPN ranked it the top football game of all time.[1] It is the best-selling sport video game in history, with combined sales of over 600 million copies.[2] FIFA games are played in either Simulation mode (which is Football Manager-like) or Real Life mode (which is FIFA Manager-like). The most recent game, FIFA 19, was the first to be launched with a subscription option, with a microtransaction platform based on Ultimate Team.[3] Players can purchase packs of players in Ultimate Team, or buy them with real-world money. Gameplay FIFA games have a large emphasis on player control, where the gameplay is more focused on team play than league simulation. This fact may be what draws gamers to FIFA games as opposed to Football Manager games. Most FIFA games are set in Europe, the Americas, and Africa. Simulation Mode In Simulation mode, players' squads are created, and can be coached from the ground up. The players can be set with their background (ethnicity, home country, etc), and may even have personalities based on their real life counterparts. Players can also have their first names and nicknames set at the start. Players can also alter various other features such as height, weight, fitness, stamina, stamina, goal-scoring ability, acceleration, ball control, shots, set pieces, and fouls. In addition, players can set team formations, formations can vary from a 4-4-2 to 4-3-3, 4-1-4-1 or 4-3-2-1, to a 2-4-2-4 or a 3-5-2. Players can also set the number of substitutions, and can even set up different transition systems. This is the closest to the game's Football Manager (FM) mode. Real Life Mode In Real Life mode, players can alter settings manually such as the weather, pitch size, distance, field length, and others. They can also set training programmes for their players, and can set goalkeeping. In
